CINEBISTRO

Sometimes, it's all about the context.
 Cinebistro Vail is part of a theatre chain which offers food, drink and fancy seating.
 But what really singles it out is the fact that it's set in one of the world's great ski resorts.
 So you get to play all day on Vail's immaculate pistes, or thrash through the powder in its celebrated back bowls and then – when your legs have turned to jelly – put your feet up with a glass of wine and the latest no-brainer Hollywood thriller. Perfect.

THE FUTURE IS RED

And more movies are being filmed digitally though a professional digital movie camera an expensive investment, semi-professional cameras now offer video of a quality to satisfy the most expert of cinematographers. Movies like Drive and Marvel's The Avengers feature footage shot with a Canon 5D Mark II, a camera with a US$ 2,000 price tag. Now the sequel has arrived. With even more video functions, the 5D Mark II retails at around US$ 3,500. And if your ambitions are now seriously lit, you might get hold of a Red One camera. Launched in 2006, Jim Jannard, maker of Oakley sunglasses, and his company has convinced some of the biggest names in the industry of the future of moviemaking, with Steven Soderbergh and James Cameron among the earliest converts. When his The Hobbit premieres in December, it will feature state-of-the-art 3D cinematography shot with fewer than 48 of the latest top-of-the-line digital cameras. What better recommendation can a manufacturer get? The camera retails at around US$ 35,000 just for the body, or the brain, as Red calls it. www.Red.com
